Transport Canada requires all small commercial marine vessels between 15 and 150 gross tonnage to be inspected and certified by Transport Canada. Any smaller vessel that carries more than 12 passengers must also be inspected and certified. After an initial inspection, regular inspections are required. The frequency depends upon the vessel's commercial use.

Transport Canada requires all commercial vessels to be registered. There are two options, the Canadian Register of Vessels and the Small Vessel Register.

Transport Canada recommends that AEM contact the Marine Safety and Security Services for more information regarding these requirements. Any questions regarding the Marine Safety and Security Services requirements should be directed to the Marine Safety Transport Canada Centre:
