Key Changes in the 2018 Draft ROP

- In 2018, the revisions to the Board’s 2009 version of the ROP were intended to reflect:
  - The implementation of the Nunavut Planning and Project Assessment Act (NuPPAA) in July, 2015;
  - NIRB’s increasing experience with different types of assessments (e.g. phased development and SEA) and the resulting need for greater procedural flexibility and “scalability”;
  - NIRB’s emerging best practices with respect to community involvement;
  - Broadening the scope of the ROPs to apply to a range of Board “proceedings” rather than being limited to NIRB Public Hearings only;
  - The NIRB’s electronic registry and moving away from exchange of hard copy documents; and
  - Reorganization to better reflect distinctions between file administration/logistical direction (addressed by staff and Executive Director) and substantive procedural matters (addressed by the Board)

NIRB Draft ROP (November 2018 version):

Summary of Written Comments and the Board’s Responses

1.0 BACKGROUND

In November 2018, the Nunavut Impact Review Board (NIRB or Board) commenced the consultation process on the updated and substantively revised set of the Board’s Rules of Procedure (ROP) to govern the Board’s conduct of various types of proceedings. The Board invited comments on the November 2018 consultation draft of the ROP (the draft ROP), with a comment period that closed on March 15, 2019. In addition to the formal request for comment, both before and after the close of the comment period, the Board has provided opportunities for parties to provide feedback regarding the draft ROP.

The summary table that follows lists the comments received and identifies the Board’s response. Where the comment resulted in a change to the draft ROP, the Board has identified the changes to the draft ROP made by the Board in response. Where the comment did not result in a change to the draft ROP, the Board has provided a brief statement of the Board’s rationale for not making a change to the draft ROP.

During the comment period, the Board received:

- 157 written comments that are relevant to the ROPs
- Comments from 4 Inuit Organizations: Nunavut Tunngavik Incorporated; Kitikmeot Inuit Association, Kivalliq Inuit Association; and the Qikiqtani Inuit Association
- Comments from 3 Governments: Government of Canada; Government of Nunavut; and Government of the Northwest Territories
- Comments from 2 Current Project Proponents: Agnico Eagle Mines Limited; and TMAC Resources Inc.

The Board thanks all parties for their thorough review of the draft ROP and the provision of extensive comments. The Board appreciates the efforts taken by all commenters to improve the quality of the Board’s ROP by enhancing the clarity and completeness of the draft ROP. Reflecting both the written comments received and the Board’s own internal review and revision process, the Board made over 200 substantive revisions to the draft ROP, including approximately 130 additions to the draft ROP and over 70 deletions from the draft ROP and has prepared a revised version of the ROP to reflect the feedback received. In March 2020, the global COVID-19 pandemic required the Board to modify the NIRB’s processes to enhance the use of remote access technologies and incorporate public health measures into the Board’s existing procedures for in-person proceedings. Select revisions to the draft ROP to reflect the Board’s approach to these and future modifications were incorporated into the 2022 revised version of the draft ROP.

2.0 NEXT STEPS

- There were four main categories of comments:
  - Editorial (typos, corrections, circular references, etc.);
  - Seeking clarity in terms of process, timing and/or the role of parties and the Board;
  - Requesting the Board specify limits or describe the factors that must be considered by the Board when exercising discretion; and
  - Requesting participants be given additional opportunities to review and comment before the Board exercises discretion with respect to some matters.

What You Won't See

- A snapshot of regulatory boards and tribunals across Canada in 2023 indicates some regulators are maintaining on-line proceedings as the default, hosting in-person proceedings only if there are special circumstances
- This will not be the approach for the NIRB, as the Board's preference for in-person proceedings remains due to many factors, such as respect for Inuit oral traditions, recognizing the role of elders, the significant logistical, technological, financial, human resource and other practical constraints in Nunavut
